Gods at the Corner: Religious Associations and Interstitial Cult Spaces in the Western Greek Poleis of Sicily

Dr. Des. Marcella Boglione

11.12.26, 12.30 - 14.00 Uhr, B 241

This paper examines religious associations through places of worship situated outside major sanctuaries, particularly in domestic and neighbourhood contexts. Drawing on archaeological evidence from Megara Hyblaea, Agrigento, Selinunte and Himera, including street-corner altars, it explores how small groups established a religious and social presence within the urban fabric. Particular attention is given to the participants' age, status and family ties, investigating how these associations formed through spontaneous gatherings and independently financed cultic activities.
